

PROF. GARNER DIES SUDDENLY

Noted Student of Monkeys Stricken While on Way To Cuba.

ILL ONLY A FEW DAYS Was Planning to Establish Colony of Apes on Congo Coast.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Jan. 23.—With the death here today of Prof. Richard Lynch Garner, who lived in Baltimore at various times, there passes one of the country's greatest experts on the subject of anthropoids, the man whose entire life was devoted to the quest for the missing link, but whose most sensational discovery, as he claimed, was that Simians in the jungle made use of a peculiar language.

His son, Harry E. Garner, lives in Baltimore.

The professor died in the Chattanooga hospital, after an illness of several days, while on his way to Cuba. His identity during his brief stay remained hidden, and was revealed only after his death, when it was learned that he was accompanied by Clark Abbott, a New York attorney, and intended settling for the remainder of his life on the East coast.

Prof. Garner has been in the public eye for twenty-seven years. He has contributed widely to European and American periodicals and has lectured at the world's famous universities. In the course of his investigations into the habits of apes and monkeys he experienced several narrow escapes from death.

He was born in Abington, Va., in 1848, and served in the Confederate army throughout the civil war. Following Lee's surrender he went to southwestern Virginia, where he became engaged in school teaching. Later he went to Kentucky, because of the superintendent of public schools at Covington, and married Margaret Gross, of Lockport, Ky.

It was in the zoo at Cincinnati that Prof. Garner first became interested in the chattering of monkeys, because of a series of experiments with the anthropoids, his studies took him to the West Indies, South America and finally to Africa.

When he returned from the jungles of Africa, his revelations regarding the monkeys caused worldwide comment. He made several subsequent trips to Africa in the interest of his studies. His latest expeditions were to the Congo, where he was here, where his collections are now being gathered.

Prof. Garner regarded as the strongest proof of his theory the educated chimpanzee, "Buster," which he brought back to New York. The professor raised the chimpanzee from its birth.

OPEN PHYSICAL FITNESS DRIVE

U. S. Health Service to Lay Evils Disclosed by Draft Before Boys.

"Keep fit for your country's sake" is the message every boy between the ages of 15 and 20 in the United States will receive shortly from the United States Public Health Service.

The service is opening a campaign to awaken the boys of the country to the lessons taught by the fact that of every three men who presented themselves for military service during the war two were turned down as physically unfit to serve their country. The service emphasizes this fact, not with the idea of raising every boy in the country to a soldier, but because physical disability will prevent them from entering any field that requires strong, vigorous manhood.

The campaign has received the strong approval of Surgeon General Ireland, of the army, and Surgeon General Braisted, of the navy; the Y. M. C. A.; the churches; welfare organizations and educators throughout the country.

In the received yesterday by Surgeon General Blue, of the U. S. Public Health Service, General Ireland says:

"A man's mental and moral attitude, his character, are largely the result of influences which have molded him before he reaches the age of military service and can be improved afterwards only with difficulty, and by means that stir him deeply."

General Braisted writes:

"The habits of a lifetime are formed by what we think and do each day as young men. I take great pleasure in endorsing the movement to arouse the young boys of the country to their duty to themselves and the nation."

Rescue Powhatan Victims To Reach Land Today; 85 Live in Washington to land the passengers who have been suffering from exposure and lack of food during the five days the Powhatan floundered in a high sea. The eleven women and two children on board the Powhatan were taken off in the first lifeboat and treated by the ship's doctor after they reached the Northern Pacific.

All the passengers are well, nevertheless, according to messages received by the port and zone transportation service here.

A radio received here yesterday afternoon said that eight of the Northern Pacific's boat crew had perished, but it has been found that the Leary picked them up.

Last of A. E. F. Returning.

Governor Thomas E. Campbell, of Arizona; United States Senator John Kendrick, of Wyoming, and John Hays Hammond will in all probability among the 200 newcomers who are going to the bay tomorrow morning on the steamer Powhatan, returning from the Northern Pacific, according to Herbert Wall, secretary of the Rocky Mountain Club, 65 West Forty-fourth street. These troops are among the last of the American Expeditionary Forces, and the Rocky Mountain Club has made elaborate plans for their entertainment while in the city.

Provision also made for the entertainment of the 200 men who sailed on the Powhatan, but who were transferred to the Northern Pacific when the former liner met with an accident at sea.

Leave to Meet Kin.

Many Washingtonians left for New York last night to meet the eighty-five local residents who were passengers on board the ill-fated Powhatan. News of the expected arrival today of the Northern Pacific, carrying the 271 survivors of the army transport, relieved seventy-two hours of nervous tension among the many District relatives of passengers of the ship.

It will be a great get-together party in the metropolis today when the wives, daughters, mothers and sweethearts of those aboard the transport once again clasp their fond relatives and friends in their arms. Many people had held out hope for the safe transfer of the passengers from the ill-fated Powhatan to the Northern Pacific. However, it was accomplished with little difficulty.

Washingtonians were warmly welcomed throughout the city yesterday.

Graves Unit Abord.

Since Monday morning, when news first reached here that the Powhatan had sent out a call for help, fear for the fate of the passengers was held out. Reassuring messages received from boats going to the rescue of the ill-fated ship failed to relieve the tension, and the War Department was beset with inquiries at what time.

Most of the local persons aboard the ship are attached to the Graves Registration Service, and were going to France to aid in the work of marking and recovering the bodies of American soldiers killed in the war. Some were going for a period of two years, while others for an indefinite time.

More prominent among them aboard the ship was Harry Bosse, a former local undertaker, whose establishment was located at Fourth and East Capitol street. Mr. Bosse was serving as chief embalmer among the undertakers. Mr. Bosse was a well-known man. His acquaintance in the city numbers hundreds of persons.

First Message Sunday.

There are several on board the ship who are listed as Washingtonians who came to this city for a short time.

Sedition Bill Expected To Die in House Today; Ask Palmer to Appear

bell stated at the close of yesterday's hearing.

Attorney General Palmer's failure to appear before the committee in support of the bill was severely criticized at the hearing yesterday.

"It seems to me a clear case of cold feet," said Representative Rodenberg, Republican, of Illinois.

Mr. Rodenberg announced that at today's meeting he will make a motion that the committee insist upon the Attorney General's appearance, in order that his exact views may be heard.

"Early this week he asked to be the first to withdraw his support in support of this legislation, while yesterday we received a letter withdrawing this support and giving no real explanation for his failure to appear before the committee. It seems to me a clear case of cold feet."

Democratic members of the committee resented the attack on the Attorney General. Representative Poirer, of North Carolina, said:

"There are cold feet nearer home than the Attorney General. Let us quit sparring and trying to reap some political advantage out of all this."

Chairman Campbell pointed out last night that Mr. Palmer first suggested the legislation and the propaganda in its favor immediately was started. The people of the country were greatly stirred up, fearing the government was in imminent danger of being swallowed up by revolutionists.

Palmer's Statement.

But when the bill came up in Congress, continued Mr. Campbell, the public knew nothing of what they contained and presumed they were designed to reach the dangerous radical Mr. Palmer. Said he could not deal with under existing laws. When it was learned that the bills actually contained those who had clamored for the legislation, the chairman declared were the first to demand its defeat.

"Mr. Palmer evidently received some telegrams and letters similar to those that came to me," added Mr. Campbell.

The Attorney General explained his attitude toward the sedition legislation in this formal statement last night.

"I am entirely erroneous impression of my attitude toward the so-called Graham and Sterling sedition bills has gone out through the press. My position in regard to sedition legislation is the same as it has been since I first submitted, in response to a request of the Senate committee, a tentative draft of a measure which, in my opinion, will cover all the needs of the situation. As at no time, personally or officially, I have pressed approval of the provisions of any sedition measure, except the one submitted in my report to the Senate and which has been introduced in the House by Representative Dwyer."

Sought Him, Says Campbell.

Chairman Campbell, of the Rules Committee, does not agree with this explanation of the Attorney General's position. He says Mr. Palmer sought him out on the floor of the House last Monday and arranged to appear as a first witness at the hearings beginning Thursday. According to Mr. Campbell, the Attorney General said he would welcome an opportunity to explain the provisions of the bill and show the country it was not such a "bugaboo" as some people were trying to make it appear.

Democrat in the House, it was learned, had made an attempt to get Mr. Palmer to go before the committee and record his views.

Brooke Cochran of New York, representing the first people in the United States, will appear before the committee today in opposition to the bill.

Only Among them were William H. Smoke, Jr., and his wife, Mrs. Grace Smoke. They made their home only temporarily in Washington.

Everybody today was wondering whether the eighty-five local survivors would continue their arduous journey to the Graves Registrations Service and make the visit to France, despite the accident which befell them on the first journey.

The safe transfer of the Powhatan passengers and the arrival of the ship New York today brings to a close a striking sea drama, which opened Sunday, when the first message was received from the transport that the ship was leaking and help needed immediately.

The wireless calls for help were quickly responded to by half a score of vessels, which put out from Canadian and American ports.

Helpless Four Days.

When the first ship reached the Powhatan—the Cedric of the White Star Line—found the transport rolling in a stormy sea, without lights or heat, but were helpless to render any aid in the face of a persistent gale. For four days more the Powhatan lay helpless in the face of the unabating storm, while a growing fleet of would-be rescuers made vain efforts to take her in tow or effect a transfer of her passengers. On repeated occasions, long lines were passed, only to snap like pack thread under the terrific strain of the derelict's dead weights, the surging sea and the fierce wind. Grave fears were felt for the outcome of the battle up to Thursday night, when the welcome news was received that the weather was moderating and that a fresh and apparently successful effort to take the Powhatan in tow had been made by the Lady Laurier and Western Guard. It was not, however, until twenty-four hours later that it was possible to rescue the passengers from the cheerless sea prison on which they had been immersed for five days without heat or light.

LADY ASTOR'S BROTHER FIGHTS FOR SUFFRAGE IN VIRGINIA

Carrie Chapman Catt's Recent Activities for Cause Bring Criticism by Harry St. George Tucker in Senate at Richmond.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 23.—One of the hottest fights that has ever taken place in the political history of Virginia began today when the Susan B. Anthony suffrage amendment to the Constitution of the United States was submitted to the House of Delegates.

It is already at work devising ways and means for its defeat.

It is said that more than half the members of the senate are in favor of passing the amendment and enfranchising the women, while the house has a majority against it.

Members of the opposing committee in the upper branch already have drafted a resolution providing for defeat of the amendment. A similar measure is expected to be introduced in the house.

Both branches of the legislature are hard at work in an effort to consider as much legislation as possible at this session. Committees are working late into the night to get bills in shape.

Col. W. H. Langhorne, member of the House of Delegates from Albemarle, brother of Lady Nancy Astor, of the British Parliament, today aligned himself with the woman suffrage advocates in the legislature.

He has for years been an aggressive opponent of equal suffrage, but yielded to the personal appeal of Lady Astor and renounced his prejudices against votes for women.

There are now sixteen members of the House of Delegates supporting a suffrage resolution, which will be introduced tomorrow.

Harry St. George Tucker, former Representative from the Tenth Virginia district and once candidate for governor of Virginia, addressed the house of delegates on "States Rights." He admitted that the argument in favor of equal suffrage was strong, but he was not concerned so much with the question of the enfranchisement of women as he was as to how this was to be obtained. He objected to the Federal amendment method, fearing that the States would be denuded of their rights.

He indulged in ridicule in referring to addresses delivered in advocacy of equal suffrage yesterday night by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt and William Jennings Bryan. She had presented roses to the State senators at their desks.

Favorable report was made by the senate committee on course of justice on Senator Rison's bill allowing women to practice law in Virginia. A bill providing that no official in administering an oath shall require any one to kiss the Bible was also favorably reported.

Richmond News.

Richmond, Jan. 23.—Col. S. M. Newhouse, of Culpeper County, doorkeeper of the house, announced that he is a candidate to succeed Prohibition Commissioner Peters in the event that the legislature decides not to abolish the office. Personally, he is in favor of abolishment. Col. Newhouse is a former deputy collector of internal revenue and has had considerable experience in handling cases similar to those coming within range of the prohibition department.

Senator West has introduced a bill calling for an amendment to the constitution increasing the salary of governor of Virginia from $5,000 to $10,000.

Cary Breckenridge Easley, son of John C. Easley, president of the chamber of commerce, died yesterday in a Boston hospital from pneumonia. He was a graduate of Virginia Military Institute and later a student at Harvard. He served in the war as a first lieutenant.

Approval of a plan for a national brotherhood monument at Fort Wool in Hampton Roads was given by the State commission on a permanent memorial to Virginia's soldier dead in the world war. The commission recommended that a State memorial assume the form of a library building, in lieu of the present State library, a condition precedent being that the city and State and containing bronze tablets with lists of soldiers and sailors from each county and city. The plan also provided for the erection of a monument to the city and State and containing bronze tablets with lists of soldiers and sailors from each county and city.

N. J. GOVERNOR SCORNS CRITIC

Poindexter's Doing "Mental Fandango" on Prohibition Question.

Jersey City, N. J., Jan. 23.—Governor Edward I. Edwards tonight gave out a statement in reply to the letter of United States Senator Miles Poindexter attacking the New Jersey governor's attitude on the prohibition question. He says:

"I have read the summary of the letter of Senator Poindexter in reference to the attempt to have the Supreme Court of the United States pass upon the legality of the so-called eighteenth amendment."

"I am amazed at the wildness of his statements. It begins to look to me as if this prohibition propaganda was akin to the epidemic of St. Vitus' dance in New Jersey, in which all those who came anywhere near the victims of this madness were forced against their will to go through the most peculiar contortions."

"After another leading man of the country seem to whirl about in a mental haze like derelicts drunk on their own enthusiasm. No sooner made to the legally established jurisdiction of the courts of adequate jurisdiction is really an amendment of the Constitution."

"My position is perfectly plain to the people of New Jersey. They have a right to attack this amendment, and they intend to attack it, and if they can, legally destroy it."

Record Broken With No Drunks In Police Court

All the records were broken in the District branch of the Police Court yesterday.

For the first time since the Police Court succeeded the old police magistrate system, there was not a single case of intoxication on the docket.

Chief Clerk Frank Sebring, who has been connected with the court more than twenty-five years, cannot recall a similar record.

WIDOW, WITH 4, IN D. C. DRY NET

Says She Gave Whisky to Policeman as a Favor.

The first case of alleged violation of the provisions of the United States prohibition act was presented in Police Court yesterday by Assistant U. S. District Attorney Ralph Given, who is devoting his entire time to the prosecution of cases under the new law.

Mrs. Annie Simmonds, a white widow, the mother of several children, the youngest but three months of age, was charged by Policeman O. C. Ryan, of the Fifth precinct, with selling liquor. He alleges that he purchased a half pint of whisky from Mrs. Simmonds, paying her $4 in marked money for it. Mrs. Simmonds said she believed the policeman to be a friend of her father, who is employed at the Indian Head Ordnance proving ground, and let him have the liquor from her father's private stock as a favor. She had her nursing babe with her and said her three other children were down with the whooping cough.

The trial was set for next Wednesday and bonds were fixed at $500. Two other cases were set for the same day and bonds were fixed in the same sum. The defendants are Robert R. Lenhart, charged with transporting two quarts of whisky, and Clarence Cunningham, charged with transporting one quart.

Collaterals in the sum of $10 each were forfeited by Robert Clark and John F. Parker, each charged with "transporting." Half-pint flasks of whisky were found on their persons.

Prosecutor Given said the prohibition law makes the offense of "transporting" intoxicating liquor punishable by a fine of not more than $1,000 and not exceeding six months in jail, and the confiscation of the automobile or other vehicle in which it is "transported." Carrying a pocket flask is "transporting" under the new law.

LOWDEN BOOM GAINS IN FAVOR

Business Men for Him and Southern Farmers Too, Says Holland.

Governor Lowden, who has sojourning in New York for a day or two, has gained the favor of many business men so that they now say that he is the man to be nominated for President next June he now has their cordial support, personal, financial, if needed, and political.

President of the largest industries in New England said a few hours after Governor Lowden's departure, "I am beginning to hope that the Republican convention will make choice of Governor Lowden."

He has appealed to business men because although at first a lawyer, nevertheless he has been for many years highly successful in business undertakings and has become a good understanding of what is good for the farmers of the United States as any other of those who have been spoken of as available candidates for the Presidential nomination.

Recently Governor Lowden has been visiting the South, not as a politician but as an experienced man of agriculture. Lowden, though many years ago for the purpose of making investigation of the soil possibilities of that section. He had visited Cuba, having been told almost marvelous stories of the richness of the Cuban soil. But while admitting that Cuba does possess a soil abounding in the qualities that permit cultivation of meat crops, nevertheless he had discovered after careful investigation that in the Mississippi valley are lands which matched in fertility the soil of Cuba. He therefore became one of those who recently purchased large areas of alluvial land in the Mississippi valley.

He is quoted as having said, "Wherever I have gone in this country or any other I have seen no land which in my opinion is the equal of the Mississippi Valley and some other parts of the South." As a result, Governor Lowden, a man of agriculture of the South that no man now living can fully estimate the agricultural value of the South to the entire United States.

Not a word of politics in his country. He therefore has no hint that he was aware that his friends are seeking his nomination for President, but only as a farmer upon a great scale did he speak to the men of the South, who are with such remarkable success cultivating its rich soil.

To business men here he spoke like a man of high expert authority on business conditions, and to others he revealed a profound understanding of what the true relation between the employers and the employed should be. For these reasons it is not with astonishment that we learn that the preliminary campaign in favor of the nomination of Gov. Lowden is well under way, and that it is receiving even greater support from business men than from the politicians.
